Description:
Part 1: Ottawa Partner Assault Support Team: A model for high risk case coordination
By Andrea McCue and Vivian-Lee Stewart

This presentation will review the development and protocols of the Ottawa Partner Assault Support Team (PAST), a high risk coordination team founded in 1997. The purpose of the committee is to review high risk domestic violence cases and promote a coordinated criminal justice response to issues of domestic and family violence. The team is comprised of representatives from the Ottawa Crown Attorney's Office, local police agencies, Victim Crisis Unit (VCU), Probation & Parole Services, Children's Aid Society or Ottawa Carleton (CAS), the City of Ottawa, and the Victim Witness Assistance Program (VWAP). PAST has relied on coordination between provincial and municipal governments as well as community agencies.

Part 2: High risk domestic violence cases: A police approach to support victims and offenders
By Tara Borden, Brad Kincade, and Jillian Gibson

This presentation focuses on a policing approach to high risk cases which supports both victims and the accused. Halifax Regional Police Victim Services created a pilot project to help the offender navigate the process in conjunction with victim. The team involves a Domestic Violence Case Coordinator, the Domestic Violence (Police) Officer, and the Domestic Violence Offender Navigator. This model reduces recidivism by helping to the victim and offender through the court process and by advocating for housing and immediate access to counselling and programs. The team will present their model and discuss case outcomes.

Hello. I very much look forward to your presentation. In Ottawa, corruption has crept into the "collaboration" to the point where essentially the abuser can [redacted] 100% parental alienation, hospitalization, criminalization and marginalization of the victim. I am living proof and I am documenting the entire experience at pfi.rocks/careers

Abstract: Sociopaths and psychopaths are incredibly talented at turning good into evil: Ottawa's collaborative effort, PAST, serves as an excellent example.

Partner Assault Support Team? Uh-huh, they certainly got the name right.

coming soon
